

Making 'Word' documents accessible: group activity

Collection: Inclusive teaching

Resource: Inaccessible documents

Approximate duration

45 minutes

Learning Outcomes

To be aware of some key requirements for making 'PowerPoint' presentations accessible.

Introduction

'Word' has become every lecturer's friendly vade mecum--the one computer programme we all seem to be thoroughly happy to use and at ease in using. Its full potential is not always realised, however, and it is easy to knock out a quick handout without thinking too much about accessibility issues. This exercise will help participants internalise some simple guidelines for making 'Word' documents usable by the widest possible range of students.

The activity

This activity requires the use of a computer with 'Word' loaded attached to a projector. It uses two files which you will find in the same folder as this resource in HumBox:

- An inaccessible 'Word' document - This document, on reading poetry, was submitted by a lecturer to HumBox, a repository of 'open educational resources' in the humanities donated by lecturers for reuse by colleagues. It has been specially altered to be made inaccessible for the purposes of this activity.
- Some guidelines on the accessible use of 'Word' - <http://webaim.org/techniques/word/> (WebAIM)

1. Print out the inaccessible 'Word' document and selections from the WebAIM material.
2. Distribute copies of the 'Word' document to all members of the group. Keep the WebAIM material in reserve.
3. Project the 'Word' document onto a screen. Go through it with the group, calling for suggestions as to how it should be altered to be made more accessible. Agree each change with the group as a whole before editing the document yourself onscreen.
4. When the group is happy with the altered document as it appears on the screen, distribute the WebAIM guidance.
5. Go through the WebAIM material with the group, checking to see what guidelines you have not observed.
